Showcasing your collections: using libraries as exhibition spaces

This workshop will be of particular appeal to new graduates or library staff working in special collections areas. It will be of equal interest to library staff working in further and higher education environments who may be seeking some practical skills and advice on ways to engage students and staff in their library collections. As well as gaining some basic curatorial skills, attendees will also get some insider tips on how to make their displays and exhibitions more successful.

Further information about the event will be made available on the ARLIS website: www.arlis.org.uk
Please contact Annamarie McKie at amckie@ucreative.ac.uk
